"È opinione diffusa, di evidente origine romantica, che le idee che sostanziano tutte le forme dell'Arte siano estranee alla coscienza dell'uomo: fantasmi fluttuanti nell'aura culturale che ci circonda. Divino dono dell'artista è coglierle ed elaborarle costringendole all'interno di una personale concezione del mondo.

Questa preziosa e rara facoltà dell'artista passa sotto il nome di "ispirazione poetica". Io, al contrario, sono convinto che le idee creative siano il risultato del cumulo di innumerevoli esperienze, suggestioni e osservazioni che costituiscono il patrimonio di cultura che ogni essere umano possiede nei diversi gradi di intensità.

È da quel mondo di pensieri sedimentali che va estrapolata l'idea generatrice delle forme.

Da progettista dei mobili ACROS non so dire, con certezza, da quale impulso ideale sia stato sollecitato nell'immaginare la loro fisionomia figurativa.

Forse dal concetto cartesiano della "geometria" quale divina misura dell'Universo; forse per gemmazione delle opere, da me molto studiate e ammirate, di Gerrit Rietveld; forse semplicemente quale omaggio alle ossessioni metafisiche di Josef Albers o di Mathias Ungers.

Quel che so con certezza è che all'interno del vorticoso magma dei miei pensieri, accumulati in tanti e tanti anni, c'erano anche quel tavolo e quel mobile contenitore".

It is commonly known, with a clear romantic origin, that all ideas that contribute to form any kind of art, are alien to human conscience: ghosts generated in the cultural aura that surrounds us. Divine gift of the artist is being able to grasp and elaborate ideas forcing them in a personal cognition of the world.

This precious and unique ability of artists is known as "poetical inspiration". Personally, under a totally different perspective. I'm convinced that creative ideas are the result of the accumulation of our numerous experiences, emotions and observations that form our culture, owned in different levels of intensity by every human being.

It is from this world of sedimentary thoughts that the form-generating idea must be extracted. As the designer of ACROS items I cannot say, with certainty, from which ideal impulse their figurative forms have been created.

Maybe from the Cartesian concept of "geometry" considered the divine measurement of the universe, maybe by an ideal sublimation of Gerrit Rietveld's masterpieces, which I deeply admired and studied, maybe as a simple homage to all metaphysical obsessions of Josef Albers or Mathias Ungers.

What I know with certainty is that inside the whirlwind of magma of my thoughts, gathered in many years, there were also That table and That storage unit.
